INDIANAPOLIS

COLOR ME INDY
The Indiana Central Canal was originally going to be 300 miles long. It didn’t quite make it. Do you know why?
Milktooth is a critically acclaimed restaurant in Indianapolis. Get there early and bring your appetite.
There are a number of murals throughout the city of Indianapolis with a range of subjects from geometric shapes to jazz legends like Wes Montgomery. Can you find this one and finish the mural?
Second to DC, Indianapolis has the most war memorials in America.
The Indianapolis Museum of Art is home to Robert Indiana’s ‘Love’ sculpture, an icon of the Pop Art movement.
The sixth floor of the Central Library has one of the best views in the city and boasts a beautiful interior as well.
The Children's Museum of Indianapolis is the largest children's museum in the world. Even the dinosaurs want to get in.
The City Market has over thirty food vendors offering everything from crêpes to tamales.
The Cultural Trail is an eight mile trail that weaves throughout the city providing accessibility to cyclists and pedestrians.
You can find Ann Dancing by Julian Opie on the corner of Massachusetts Avenue, Alabama Street, and Vermont Street. See if you can draw her mid-dance.
A sculpture of five deer jumping through the water appears in front of the Eiteljorg Museum of American Indians and Western Art. Can you draw this deer?
Duckpin bowling, rooftop restaurants, heavy-metal burgers and, of course, a fountain in a triangle. It's Fountain Square.
Here is one of the many talented artists at the Harrison Center for the Arts, which hosts 36 studio artists and holds rotating exhibitions every First Friday.
The Indy 500 brings in crowds from around the globe to witness the Greatest Spectacle in Racing.
Landmark for Peace, located in Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Park, honors the contributions of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and Robert F. Kennedy.
LUNA is Indy’s go-to record shop. It has been called one of the best record stores in the nation.
The Madame Walker Theatre Center celebrates African-American cultural arts and is named after the first self-made female millionaire in America, Madam C.J. Walker.
The famous graphic designer, Milton Glaser, created the mural “Color Fuses” in 1975. It wraps around the lower half of the Minton Capehart Federal Building.
The Soldiers’ and Sailors’ Monument is in the center of Indianapolis, the ‘Crossroads of America.’
PRINTEXIT, the only shop exclusively selling periodicals in the central United States, is located in Indianapolis’s Midtown. You’re guaranteed to find a beautiful magazine and a new friend.
The Indiana Repertory Theatre is one of the most ornate buildings in downtown Indianapolis. Its professional theatre company presents nine shows a season.
Most famous for the Osiris, the Wee Mac, and the Sunlight Cream Ale, Sun King is one of Indiana’s largest brewing companies and boasts over 200 brews.
Indianapolis Union Station was the first Union Station in the world and at one point housed a go-kart track and the Mexican consulate.
Victory Field is a minor league baseball field in downtown Indianapolis. Can you replicate the iconic sign in its arch above?
Created, designed, and written by Grant Thomas.

Color Me Indy was the winning idea at the “Look Indy, The City is Your Classroom” 5x5 idea competition, hosted by the Harrison Center for the Arts. This program was made possible through the generosity of the Christel DeHaan Family Foundation, Central Indiana Community Foundation, the Efroymson Family Fund and the Lilly Endowment.